

Why Do Veterans Deserve Our Support, Respect and Understanding?

By Janessa Murphy, 8th Grade, Orange Park Junior High

Veterans go through a lot in order to keep our country safe. They go through a lot of stress, sacrifices, and hard work, and they do this because they love their country. They want to keep their country and its people safe and to protect the freedoms we have here. Veterans do so much to deserve our support, respect, and understanding. It is important that we show this to them.

Veterans deserve our support because of their selflessness in protecting our country. Veterans continue to serve and protect our country even though it can be very stressful. They have to spend long periods of time away from their families. Personally, I have family who have struggled through this and had to make the sacrifice to leave. They are traveling to foreign countries, knowing of the risk that they could die there. Veterans have hard jobs, which can be very stressful and that is why they deserve our support. It is important that we encourage them to keep them in higher spirits while they are on stateside duty and overseas. Sending encouraging letters to thank veterans is an easy way people can help to support veterans. Also, it is important to not only thank veterans on duty, but also discharged veterans who have served and protected our country, some for a long time. Many of these veterans have helped our country tremendously and have fought in wars that had a great impact on how we live today. It is hard for them as well because many of them may suffer from PTSD. Many veterans have this illness and could use support to help them move on from what traumatized them. It is important that we support veterans because of the overwhelming stress they go through in order to protect our country.

Veterans deserve our respect because they have worked to make our lives better. We have many freedoms that we carelessly enjoy that we have because of veterans. They have worked hard and sacrificed a lot in order to protect these liberties that we enjoy for free. We have rights to things like religion, education, and our own opinions. Without those veterans who fought for our rights, we would be living in a much worse condition under the rule of someone who doesn't allow those freedoms. While veterans are working to protect the rights that we have in America, we get to kick back and enjoy our lives. They have done much for us to deserve our respect.

It is important that we understand veterans and what they do for us. Many people think of Veteran's Day as a day off. They think of it as a day to relax and watch TV or to meet with friends. It is important that we take time to understand what veterans do and why they do it. We need to be aware of the fact that there are selfless people serving our country. We need to understand that they do this because they love their country and want to protect it and its people. Understanding veterans will give us a better idea of why we honor veterans.

Veterans deserve our support, respect, and understanding because of the many things they do for America. It is important that we show them appreciation as well as others who have served our country.
